SALT LAKE CITY

Harvey Natchees, 26, Ute Indian who had distinction of being first Yank to enter Berlin, center, tells Andrew Frank, left, and Joshua Washington about Berlin in few words. He said: "It's big mess."

SCALPS ARE SAFE

Indians Here For S. L. Pioneer Fete

Shades of the old west were brought to Salt Lake City Tuesday when 25 Indians—men, women and children—arrived from the Uintah-Ouray reservation to appear in special features of the Days of '47 celebration.

Dressed in plenty of color and traditional red paint on their faces, the Indians soon savvied the acute housing shortage gripping Salt Lake City. They were housed on the third floor of public health building, 115 S. State, where they will remain until Thursday.

Mrs. Ray Dillman of Roosevelt was in charge of the Indian group. Among them were Harvey Natchees, 26, first American soldier to enter Berlin after the fall of Germany, and Mrs. Natchees.

The Indians will take part in the pageant Tuesday and Wednesday nights at the University of Utah stadium in the part entitled, "This Was the West."

They will march in the parade Wednesday.

They will depart for the reservation Thursday to participate in the spiritual Sun dance at Whiterocks, Utah, which starts Friday evening. The Indians will dance until Monday at sunrise without food or drink, said Mrs. Dillman. The men will do the dancing, and the women and children will sing.

Mrs. Dillman and Mr. and Mrs. Natchees were guests of the Salt Lake Rotary club Tuesday at its luncheon in the Hotel Utah.